Economic vulnerability in different stages of life

Adressing the effects of economic violence
on gender equality
via Nordic cases

There is no gender equality without financial freedom. Policies of economic empowerment for all women are necessary to address growing problems; the gap between the rich and poor, the growing number of children living in poverty in the Nordics despite extensive welfare systems and many pensioners, particularly women, living in economic hardship. It is also important to highlight the relationship between gender-based violence and economic vulnerability. How do we pave the way to a gender-equal economy?

This report has been produced by Nordic Information on Gender (NIKK), a co-operative body under the Nordic Council of Ministers.
